

System Architecture Overview

Department: Engineering

Service Layout

The platform follows a microservices architecture with services communicating via REST and an internal message queue (RabbitMQ) for asynchronous tasks.

Data Storage

Each microservice owns its own PostgreSQL database. Cross-service data access happens only through published APIs, never direct database access.

Caching Layer

Redis is used as a caching layer for frequently accessed data, with a default TTL of 15 minutes unless otherwise specified by the service.